Peter Rabbit, on his way to school, was trying to make up his mind which of his neighbors he would ask Old Mother Nature about. He had learned so many surprising things about his own family that he shrewdly suspected that many equally surprising things were to be learned about his neighbors.

But there were so many neighbors he couldn't decide which to ask about first. But the matter was decided for him in a funny way. Hardly had he reached the edge of the Green Forest when he was hailed by a sharp voice, "Hello, Peter!" said the sharp voice. "Where are you going at this hour of the morning? You ought to be heading for your home in the dear Old Rabbithole."

Peter didn't even have to look to know whose voice that was. It was the voice of Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel. Happy Jack was on the top of an old stump, eating a nut. "I'm going to school," replied Peter, with a great deal of dignity.

Happy Jack was so surprised he dropped the nut. "Going to school? Ho, ho, ho! Going to school? That's a fine morning as this! Where and to whom and for what are you going to school?" demanded Happy Jack.

"I'm going to school to Old Mother Nature," replied Peter, a little crossly. "I've been going for several days, and so has my cousin, Jumper the Hare. We've learned a lot about our own family, and now we are going to learn about the other people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows."

"Pooh!" cried Happy Jack. "pooh! I know all about my own family. I don't need to know all there is to know about the Squirrel family," snapped Happy Jack, indignantly. "He is on his way to school to Old Mother Nature and has advised me to join him. School has advised me to join him. School has advised me to join him."

"Is that so, Mr. Know-it-all?" retorted Peter. "I don't believe you even thought I knew all mine but I found I didn't know half of them."

"What are you fellows squabbling about?" asked another voice, a sharp scolding voice, and Chatterer the Red Squirrel jumped from one tree to another just above Peter's head.

"Peter is trying to make me think I don't know all there is to know about the Squirrel family," snapped Happy Jack, indignantly. "He is on his way to school to Old Mother Nature and has advised me to join him. School has advised me to join him. School has advised me to join him."

"Maybe it is and maybe it isn't," retorted Peter. "I don't believe you even thought I knew all mine but I found I didn't know half of them."
